Terms of use: Policy: 2, 2021 Version 5.4.7 Update the app platform below the version recent. Optimization for aspect ratio of the new iPad mini. Minor bug fixes. One of the best magazines I've ever read. I was very reluctant to get the app, but when I found out I didn't renew my print subscription within the time needed I found myself at a loss waiting for my magazine to come again. So I took it.And I really think I like her better. I don't have to wait for the magazine to come in the mail. The app is excellent. Bookmarks were a bit hard to find and figure out how to use, but apart from that it's great! I used to love this app. But, some recent changes have been super annoying. The app doesn't always save your seat, even if you don't completely close the app. Then, to make matters worse, there is no way to go through the whole thing, so you have to turn the pages one by one until you go back to where you left off. But the straw is that I was recently charged an auto-renew through Apple, but was unable to get the app to sync to my Apple account. The online chat help button is not working and Calling RD was not helpful...I was told that this is an Apple issue, although I tried to explain that the problem was the shaky app itself. (Deleting and reinstalling did not help.) Apple was unable to help because the problem was within the app which is not an Apple product. Yay. But, Apple was able to refund the renewal fee and delete my account. So... app deleted. Rant forward. I'm reading something else. I loved this app when it worked. But they did something to change into "article-based". Suddenly, all my downloaded problems disappeared. Everything came with a price. Apple says my subscription is fine, I need to contact the app developers. The support number provided on the app is geared towards subscribers' printing. They can't even understand the problem. They send you to a website to sign up, which is also for print subscribers, NOT for people who pay for the app. I called them "zero understanding of the problem" twice. I sent an email to the address provided in the app. It's been a week "no response".I deleted and re-downloaded the app twice, doing everything I can think of. And there's nowhere to go for help! Nothing is worth so much frustration!! What a disappointment! Be to Reader's Digest Canada Originally Published: October 18, 2021 Jennifer Williams' mother made her passion for books. A librarian, she read to her three children every day. "Until we went to kindergarten", Williams told vadogwood.com, a local news site. "Until we went to college". When Williams, now 54, became an elementary school teacher and tutor in Danville, Virginia, she wanted her students to fall in love with reading just like she did. But he soon realized that some children had limited access to books. "It's very obvious to children's teachers which children are read to and which children aren't", she said. "It's obvious at the end of the first day of school." For Williams, the solution was simple: give books to the children. In 2017, as part of a civic event called Engage Danville, I was having breakfast in a diner, sitting next to a man who had had a coffee but without a spoon. Trying to get the maid's attention, he shouted: "Sorry, this coffee is too hot to stir with your finger." It worked. A minute later, the maid returned with another cup of coffee. "There you are", he said. "This isn't that hot." A JEFIM BRODD Kirkland, Washington Former football star and TV character Michael Strahan is known for his scattered-tooth smile.
